Jan Kern, ACC, CTC
LIFE AND LEADERSHIP COACH

Jan says...

"I see the uniqueness of the coaching modality for individuals, teams, and organizations, for faith conversations that transform. I see a vision of hope – individuals who deeply grasp who God created them to be and who are courageously rooting themselves in His plans for their future. Not because someone fed it to them, but because they have done the hard work through coaching conversations to think, pray, and reach deep to discover it. I've watched it in action. They get it. They own it. That excites me."

As a coach, I enjoy partnering with individuals and teams to activate courage, creativity, and vision, and to design strategies that support and strengthen relational foundations, personal growth, and innovative leadership.

Professional Snapshot

"Jan listened without judgment and asked me questions that helped point me toward the future. Those are the greatest gifts. I always feel stronger after our coaching conversations."

- Karen
Penn Valley, CA

"Jan spoke my language and used word pictures. Our hour up over the landscape helped me get better oriented to the bigger picture and lifted me out of my typical, narrower focus. And then I felt refreshed when I came down. Much better than crash landings."

- Judy
Portland, OR

"Jan helped me find the important things I needed to focus on. I liked that. she didn't provide the answers for me, but helped me discover where I might find them and then how I could draw conclusions and set new goals."

- Doug

Voice of COURAGE

You've heard it said of others,
"That was a courageous move."
Now those words are for you.

The person I bring to the coaching partnership is someone who is passionate about engaging in lifelong learning, embracing who God calls us to be, and actively encouraging courage, creativity, and vision in ourselves and in others. As a wife, mom, and friend, I love hanging out with family and friends, cooking together in my tiny kitchen, laughing, and having meaningful conversations.
